Councilors:

The cost of creating new parking spaces of $5000 each to be paid by the developer is ridiculously low, A more reasonable number might be $20,000 each. If the developers think that is too high, they should be requested to instead replace the spaces in kind.

Considering the vast amount of time and effort expended on downtown parking issues the last few years, I am surprised to see that there may be 30 spaces available for parking on Storrs St that hadn't been previously identified. If this is true, perhaps the continued employment of the city employees who should have previously identified these spaces needs to be reconsidered.
